Nuclear Medicine

Professional Description

A nuclear medicine specialist employs the properties of radioactive atoms and molecules in the diagnosis and treatment of disease and in research. Radiation detection and imaging instrument systems are used to detect disease as it changes the function and metabolism of normal cells, tissues, and organs. A wide variety of diseases can be found in this way, usually before the structure of the organ involved by the disease can be seen to be abnormal by any other techniques. Early detection of coronary artery disease (including acute heart attack); early cancer detection and evaluation of the effect of tumor treatment; diagnosis of infection and inflammation anywhere in the body; and early detection of blood clot in the lungs are all possible with these techniques. Unique forms of radioactive molecules can attack and kill cancer cells (eg, lymphoma, thyroid cancer) or can relieve the severe pain of cancer that has spread to bone.

The nuclear medicine specialist has special knowledge in the biologic effects of radiation exposure, the fundamentals of the physical sciences, and the principles and operation of radiation detection and imaging instrumentation systems.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Prior to entering a nuclear medicine program, residents must have completed 1 year of broad clinical education in an accredited program in the US or Canada. Nuclear medicine programs are 3 years (as of July 1, 2007).

Subspecialties

No subspecialty programs accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education; no subspecialty certificates offered by the American Board of Nuclear Medicine.

Data

Unless otherwise noted, all data are for 2009.

Ophthalmology

Professional Description

An ophthalmologist has the knowledge and professional skills needed to provide comprehensive eye and vision care. Ophthalmologists are medically trained to diagnose, monitor, and medically or surgically treat all ocular and visual disorders. This includes problems affecting the eye and its component structures, the eyelids, the orbit, and the visual pathways. In so doing, an ophthalmologist prescribes vision services, including glasses and contact lenses.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

One year of education in an accredited program is required prior to entry. Ophthalmology programs are 3 years.

Subspecialties

No subspecialty programs accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education; no subspecialty certificates offered by the American Board of Ophthalmology.

Data

Unless otherwise noted, all data are for 2009.

Adult Reconstructive Orthopaedics

Professional Description

Adult reconstructive orthopaedics includes the in-depth study, prevention, and reconstructive treatment of musculoskeletal diseases, disorders, and sequelae of injuries using medical, physical, and surgical methods in patients 17 years and older. An educational program in adult reconstructive orthopaedics may include the care of arthritis and related disorders in many anatomic regions or be limited to areas such as the hip, knee, shoulder, elbow, or ankle and foot.

Orthopaedic Sports Medicine

Professional Description

An orthopaedic surgeon trained in sports medicine provides appropriate care for all structures of the musculoskeletal system directly affected by participation in sporting activity.

A sports medicine surgeon is proficient in areas including conditioning, training, and fitness; athletic performance and the impact of dietary supplements, pharmaceuticals, and nutrition on performance and health; coordination of care within the team setting and utilizing other health care professionals; field evaluation and management; and soft tissue biomechanics injury, healing and repair. The specialist understands treatment options, both surgical and nonsurgical, as they relate to sports specific injuries and competition. Knowledge in understanding the principles and techniques of rehabilitation, athletic equipment, and orthoptic devices enables the specialist to prevent and manage athletic injuries.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of an accredited residency is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Otolaryngology

Professional Description

An otolaryngologist-head and neck surgeon provides comprehensive medical and surgical care for patients with diseases and disorders, and which affect the ears, nose, throat, respiratory, and upper alimentary systems, and related structures of the head and neck.

An otolaryngologist diagnoses and provides medical and/or surgical therapy or prevention of diseases, allergies, neoplasms, deformities, disorders, and/or injuries of the ears, nose, sinuses, throat, respiratory and upper alimentary systems, face, jaws, and the other head and neck systems. Head and neck oncology, facial plastic and reconstructive surgery, and the treatment of disorders of hearing and voice are fundamental areas of expertise.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

No previous GME is required; length of accredited programs is 5 years.

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Neurotology
- Pediatric otolaryngology
- Sleep medicine

American Board of Otolaryngology subspecialty certificates

- Neurotology
- Pediatric otolaryngology
- Plastic surgery within the head and neck
- Sleep medicine

Neurotology

Professional Description

An otolaryngologist who treats diseases of the ear and temporal bone, including disorders of hearing and balance. The additional training in otology and neurotology emphasizes the study of embryology, anatomy, physiology, epidemiology, pathophysiology, pathology, genetics, immunology, microbiology, and the etiology of diseases of the ear and temporal bone.

The neurotologist should have command of the core knowledge and understanding of:

- The basic medical sciences relevant to the temporal bone, lateral skull base, and related structures; the communication sciences, including knowledge of audiology, endocrinology, and neurology as they relate to the temporal bone, lateral skull base, and related structures
- Advanced diagnostic expertise and advanced medical and surgical management skills for the care of diseases and disorders of the petrous apex, infratemporal fossa, internal auditory canals, cranial nerves, and lateral skull base (including the occipital bone, sphenoid bone, temporal bone, mesial aspect of the dura and intradural management), in conjunction with neurological surgery

A neurotologist has acquired expertise in the medical and surgical management of diseases and disorders of the temporal bone, lateral skull base, and related structures beyond that inherent to the practice of otolaryngology-head and neck surgery.

Chemical Pathology

Professional Description

A chemical pathologist is an expert in the biochemistry of the human body in relation to the understanding of the cause and progress of disease. This physician functions as a clinical consultant in the diagnosis and treatment of human disease. Chemical pathology entails the application of biochemical data to the detection, confirmation, or monitoring of disease.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of an ACGME-accredited residency in anatomic pathology and clinical pathology, anatomic pathology, or clinical pathology is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Cytopathology

Professional Description

A cytopathologist is an anatomic pathologist trained in the diagnosis of human disease by means of the study of cells obtained from body secretions and fluids, by scraping, washing, or sponging the surface of a lesion, or by the aspiration of a tumor mass or body organ with a fine needle. A major aspect of a cytopathologist's practice is the interpretation of Papanicolaou-stained smears of cells from the female reproductive systems, the Pap test. However, the cytopathologist's expertise is applied to the diagnosis of cells from all systems and areas of the body. He/she is a consultant to all medical specialists.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

A minimum of 3 years of prior GME is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Molecular Genetic Pathology*Professional Description

A molecular genetic pathologist is expert in the principles, theory, and technologies of molecular biology and molecular genetics. This expertise is used to make or confirm diagnoses of Mendelian genetic disorders, disorders of human development, and infectious diseases and malignancies, and to assess the natural history of those disorders. A molecular genetic pathologist provides information about gene structure, function, and alteration and applies laboratory techniques for diagnosis, treatment, and prognosis for individuals with related disorders.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of a 4-year ACGME-accredited program in pathology or medical genetics is required. Length of ACGME-accredited molecular genetic pathology programs is 1 year.

Pediatrics

Professional Description

Pediatrics is a specialty that focuses on the physical, emotional, and social health of children from birth to young adulthood. Pediatric care encompasses a broad spectrum of health services ranging from preventive health care to the diagnosis and treatment of acute and chronic diseases.

Pediatrics is a discipline that deals with biological, social, and environmental influences on the developing child and with the impact of disease and dysfunction on development. Children differ anatomically, physiologically, immunologically, psychologically, developmentally, and metabolically from adults.

The pediatrician understands the constantly changing functional status of his or her patients incident to growth and development and the consequent changing standards of "normal" for age. A pediatrician is a medical specialist, who is primarily concerned with the health, welfare, and development of children, and is uniquely qualified for these endeavors by virtue of interest and initial training. Maintenance of these competencies is achieved through experience, training, continuous education, self-assessment, and practice improvement.

A pediatrician is able to define accurately the child's health status as well as to serve as a consultant and to make use of other specialists as consultants. Because the child's welfare is heavily dependent on the home and family, the pediatrician supports efforts to create a nurturing environment. Such support includes education about healthful living and anticipatory guidance for both patients and parents.

A pediatrician participates at the community level in preventing or solving problems in child health care and publicly advocates the causes of children.

Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation

Professional Description

A physician certified in physical medicine and rehabilitation is often called a physiatrist. The primary goal of the physiatrist for his patients is to achieve maximal restoration of physical, psychological, social, and vocational function through comprehensive rehabilitation. Pain management is often an important part of the role of the physiatrist. For diagnosis and evaluation, a physiatrist may include electromyography to supplement the standard history, physical, X-ray, and laboratory examinations. The physiatrist has expertise in the appropriate use of therapeutic exercise, prosthetics (artificial limbs), orthotics, and mechanical and electrical devices.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

No previous GME is required when entering an accredited 4-year program that includes 12 months of fundamental clinical skills in areas other than physical medicine and rehabilitation; 1 year of previous GME (eg, Transitional Year) is required when entering a 3-year program.

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Hospice and palliative medicine
- Neuromuscular medicine
- Pain medicine*
- Pediatric rehabilitation medicine
- Spinal cord injury medicine
- Sports medicine

* In 2007, ACGME-accredited pain medicine programs under anesthesiology, neurology, physical medicine and rehabilitation, and psychiatry were combined into a multidisciplinary pain medicine subspecialty.

American Board of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation subspecialty certificates

- Hospice and palliative medicine
- Neuromuscular medicine
- Pain medicine
- Pediatric rehabilitation medicine
- Spinal cord injury medicine
- Sports medicine

Hospice and Palliative Medicine

See page 156.

Neuromuscular Medicine

Professional Description

A physiatrist, who specializes in neuromuscular medicine, possesses specialized knowledge in the science, clinical evaluation, and management of these disorders. This encompasses the knowledge of the pathology, diagnosis, and treatment of these disorders at a level that is significantly beyond the training and knowledge expected of a general physiatrist.

Neuromuscular medicine includes the evaluation and treatment of a wide range of diseases, including motor neuron disease, myopathy/neuromuscular transmission disorders, peripheral neuropathy, cranial/spinal single and multiple mononeuropathies, polyneuropathy (infectious/inflammatory), inherited neuropathy, polyneuropathy (ischemia/physical agents/toxins), and polyneuropathy/systemic disease.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Successful completion of an ACGME-accredited program in either adult or pediatric neurology or physical medicine and rehabilitation; programs accredited by the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons (Canada) are also accepted. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Pain Medicine

See description on p. 454.

Pediatric Rehabilitation Medicine

Professional Description

A physiatrist who utilizes an interdisciplinary approach and addresses the prevention, diagnosis, treatment, and management of congenital and childhood onset physical impairments including related or secondary medical, physical, functional, psychosocial, and vocational limitations or conditions, with an understanding of the life course of disability.

This physician is trained in the identification of functional capabilities and selection of the best of rehabilitation intervention strategies, with an understanding of the continuum of care.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

A minimum of 4 years of prior GME is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 2 years (or 1 year for trainees who have completed ACGME-approved combined or consecutive programs in both physical medicine and rehabilitation and pediatrics).

Spinal Cord Injury Medicine

Professional Description

A physician who addresses the prevention, diagnosis, treatment, and management of traumatic spinal cord injury and nontraumatic etiologies of spinal cord dysfunction by working in an interdisciplinary manner. Care is provided to patients of all ages on a lifelong basis and covers related medical, physical, psychological, and vocational disabilities and complications.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

A minimum of 3 years of prior GME is required in a specialty relevant to spinal cord injury medicine, such as anesthesiology, emergency medicine, family medicine, internal medicine, neurological surgery, neurology, orthopaedic surgery, pediatrics, physical medicine and rehabilitation, plastic surgery, surgery, or urology. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Plastic Surgery

Professional Description

Plastic surgery deals with the repair, reconstruction, or replacement of physical defects of form or function involving the skin, musculoskeletal system, craniomaxillofacial structures, hand, extremities, breast and trunk, external genitalia or cosmetic enhancement of these areas of the body. Cosmetic surgery is an essential component of plastic surgery. The plastic surgeon uses cosmetic surgical principles both to improve overall appearance and to optimize the outcome of reconstructive procedures.

Special knowledge and skill in the design and surgery of grafts, flaps, free tissue transfer and replantation is necessary. Competence in the management of complex wounds, the use of implantable materials, and in tumor surgery is required. Plastic surgeons have been prominent in the development of innovative techniques such as microvascular and craniomaxillofacial surgery, liposuction, and tissue transfer. Anatomy, physiology, pathology, and other basic sciences are fundamental to the specialty.

Competency in plastic surgery implies an amalgam of basic medical and surgical knowledge, operative judgment, technical expertise, ethical behavior, and interpersonal skills to achieve problem resolution and patient satisfaction.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Accredited plastic surgery programs are either independent (3 years length) or integrated (6 years). Prerequisites for the independent programs are 1) a minimum of 3 years clinical education with progressive responsibility in a general surgery program; 2) completion of a neurological surgery, orthopaedic surgery, otolaryngology, or urology residency; or 3) completion of an educational program in oral and maxillofacial surgery approved by the American Dental Association (for individuals holding the DMD/MD or DDS/MD degree).

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Craniofacial surgery
- Hand surgery

American Board of Plastic Surgery subspecialty certificates

- Plastic surgery within the head and neck
- Surgery of the hand

Craniofacial Surgery (Plastic Surgery within the Head and Neck)

Professional Description

A plastic surgeon with additional training in plastic and reconstructive procedures within the head, face, neck, and associated structures, including cutaneous head and neck oncology and reconstruction, management of maxillofacial trauma, soft tissue repair, and neural surgery.

The field is diverse and involves a wide age range of patients, from the newborn to the aged. While both cosmetic and reconstructive surgery are practiced, there are many additional procedures that interface with them. Cosmetic procedures include otoplasty; surgery of the aging face (brow lift, blepharoplasty, face lift); rhinoplasty; facial implants (cheek, nasal, and chin); facial resurfacing; and liposuction/lipoplasty. Reconstructive procedures performed include maxillofacial trauma; skin grafts and flaps; repair of congenital facial defects (hemangiomas, cleft lip and palate, nasal abnormalities); reconstruction of the jaws and other facial bones; reanimation/rehabilitation of the paralyzed face; nerve repair; periorbital surgery; and biomedical implant insertion. Areas of research in this field include materials biocompatibility; wound healing adjuncts; skin repair/regeneration; and bone reconstruction.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of a 6-year plastic surgery program or other appropriate surgery training is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Preventive Medicine

Professional Description

A preventive medicine specialist focuses on the health of individuals and defined populations to protect, promote, and maintain health and well-being and to prevent disease, disability, and premature death. The distinctive components of preventive medicine include:

- Biostatistics and the application of biostatistical principles and methodology
- Epidemiology and its application to population-based medicine and research
- Health services management and administration, including developing, assessing, and assuring health policies; planning, implementing, directing, budgeting, and evaluating population health and disease management programs; and utilizing legislative and regulatory processes to enhance health
- Control of environmental factors that may adversely affect health
- Control and prevention of occupational factors that may adversely affect health safety
- Clinical preventive medicine activities, including measures to promote health and prevent the occurrence, progression, and disabling effects of disease and injury
- Assessment of social, cultural, and behavioral influences on health

A preventive medicine physician may be a specialist in general preventive medicine, public health, occupational medicine, or aerospace medicine. This specialist works with large population groups as well as with individual patients to promote health and understand the risks of disease, injury, disability, and death, seeking to modify and eliminate these risks.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Accredited programs are either 1, 2, or 3 years in length.

Aerospace Medicine

Professional Description

The focus of aerospace medicine is on the determination and maintenance of the health, safety, and performance of persons involved in air and space travel. Aerospace medicine, as a broad field of endeavor, offers dynamic challenges and opportunities for physicians, nurses, physiologists, bioenvironmental engineers, industrial hygienists, environmental health practitioners, human factors specialists, psychologists, and other professionals. Those in the field are dedicated to enhancing health, promoting safety, and improving performance of individuals who work or travel in unusual environments. The environments of space and aviation provide significant challenges, such as microgravity, radiation exposure, G-forces, emergency ejection injuries, and hypoxic conditions, for those embarking in their exploration. Areas of interest range from space and atmospheric flight to undersea activities, and the environments that are studied cover a wide spectrum, extending from the "micro-environments" of space or diving suits to those of "Spaceship Earth."

Occupational Medicine

Professional Description

Occupational and environmental medicine is perhaps the most wide ranging of all medical specialties. It is the medical specialty devoted to the prevention and management of occupational and environmental injury, illness and disability, and promotion of health and productivity of workers, their families, and communities.

Occupational medicine was previously identified as "industrial medicine." This term was used when heavy industry (eg, lumbering, automobile manufacturing, mining, railroads, steel manufacturers, etc) employed physicians to provide acute medical and surgical care for employees. By 1945, medical programs had spread to business organizations with a predominance of clerical and service employees. Large banks, insurance companies, mercantile establishments, etc, could not be described as industrial. Therefore, the broader designation of "occupational medicine" came into common use.

Today, the complexity and pervasiveness of modern industrial processes afford occupational and environmental medicine physicians the opportunity to address work site and environmental concerns and such community health and policy issues as atmospheric pollution, product safety, health promotion, and benefits value management. The term "environmental medicine" has also recently been used to describe this growing, challenging, modern medical specialty. Environmental medicine has been defined as the branch of medical science that addresses the impact of chemical and physical stressors on individuals and groups. Both occupational and environmental medicine use similar skills and focus on the recognition and prevention of hazardous exposures.

Public Health and General Preventive Medicine

Professional Description

A public health physician helps guide a community, agency, health organization, medical office, or program in pursuit of group or community health goals. This includes physicians who plan, provide, and administer public health and preventive medicine services in public, private, or voluntary settings.

The public health practitioner:

- Performs epidemiological investigations of acute and chronic diseases and injuries
- Uses appropriate statistical techniques in the design of studies and interpretation of findings relative to disease interventions performed on individuals and in monitoring and experimental protocols
- Plans, administers, and evaluates programs to promote health and prevent disease in medical practice settings and in public health agencies
- Designs, performs, and evaluates clinical trials
- Applies clinical interventions in the general population
- Assesses health risk factors in individual persons and groups and prescribes appropriate interventions
- Assesses and ameliorates the impact of environmental and occupational risk factors on individual persons and on groups
- Assesses the clinical and public health program needs of populations, eg, workers, communities, and military groups

Psychiatry

Professional Description

A psychiatrist specializes in the prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of mental, addictive, and emotional disorders such as schizophrenia and other psychotic disorders, mood disorders, anxiety disorders, substance-related disorders, sexual and gender identity disorders, and adjustment disorders. The psychiatrist is able to understand the biologic, psychologic, and social components of illness, and therefore is uniquely prepared to treat the whole person. A psychiatrist is qualified to order diagnostic laboratory tests and to prescribe medications, evaluate and treat psychologic and interpersonal problems, and intervene with families who are coping with stress, crises, and other problems in living.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

No previous GME is required. ACGME-accredited programs are 4 years.

Physicians may also enter programs at the GY2 level only after successfully completing one of the following:

- One clinical year of training in an ACGME-accredited internal medicine, family medicine, or pediatrics program
- An ACGME-accredited transitional year program
- One year of an ACGME-accredited residency in a clinical specialty requiring comprehensive and continuous patient care

For physicians entering at the GY2 level, the GY1 year may be credited toward the 48-month requirement.

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Addiction psychiatry
- Child and adolescent psychiatry
- Forensic psychiatry
- Geriatric psychiatry
- Hospice and palliative medicine
- Pain medicine
- Psychosomatic medicine
- Sleep medicine

American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology subspecialty certificates

- Addiction psychiatry

Professional Description

A psychiatrist who specializes in the diagnosis and treatment of psychiatric disorders and symptoms in complex medically ill patients. This subspecialty includes treatment of patients with acute or chronic medical, neurological, obstetrical, or surgical illness in which psychiatric illness affects their medical care and/or quality of life. Examples are HIV infection, organ transplantation, heart disease, renal failure, cancer, stroke, traumatic brain injury, high-risk pregnancy, and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, among others. Patients also may be those who have a psychiatric disorder that is the direct consequence of a primary medical condition, or a somatoform disorder or psychological factors affecting a general medical condition. Psychiatrists specializing in psychosomatic medicine provide consultation-liaison services in general medical hospitals, attend on medical psychiatry inpatient units, and provide collaborative care in primary care and other outpatient settings.

Radiation Oncology

Professional Description

A radiologist who deals with the therapeutic applications of radiant energy and its modifiers and the study and management of disease, especially malignant tumors.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Resident education in radiation oncology includes 5 years of accredited, clinically oriented GME, of which 4 years must be in radiation oncology. GY1 training must be spent in internal medicine, family medicine, obstetrics/gynecology, surgery or surgical specialties, pediatrics, a year of categorical radiation oncology, or a transitional year program. ACGME-accredited programs in radiation oncology are 4 years.

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Hospice and palliative medicine

American Board of Radiology subspecialty certificates

- Hospice and palliative medicine

Radiology-Diagnostic

Professional Description

A radiologist utilizes radiologic methodologies to diagnose and treat disease. Physicians practicing in the field of radiology most often specialize in radiology, diagnostic radiology, radiation oncology, or radiologic physics.

A diagnostic radiologist utilizes X-ray, radionuclides, ultrasound, and electromagnetic radiation to diagnose and treat disease.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Resident education in diagnostic radiology includes 5 years of clinically oriented GME, of which 4 years must be in diagnostic radiology. The clinical year must consist of ACGME, RCPSC, or equivalent accredited training in internal medicine, pediatrics, surgery or surgical specialties, obstetrics and gynecology, neurology, family medicine, emergency medicine, or any combination of these, or an ACGME- or equivalent accredited transitional year. ACGME-accredited programs in diagnostic radiology are 4 years.

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Abdominal radiology
- Cardiothoracic radiology
- Endovascular surgical neuroradiology
- Musculoskeletal radiology
- Neuroradiology
- Nuclear radiology
- Pediatric radiology
- Vascular and interventional radiology

American Board of Radiology subspecialty certificates

- Hospice and palliative medicine
- Neuroradiology
- Nuclear radiology
- Pediatric radiology
- Vascular and interventional radiology

Endovascular Surgical Neuroradiology*Professional Description

Endovascular surgical neuroradiology is a subspecialty that uses catheter technology, radiologic imaging, and clinical expertise to diagnose and treat diseases of the central nervous system. Practitioners have training and experience in:

- Signs and symptoms of disorders amenable to diagnosis and treatment by endovascular surgical neuroradiology techniques
- Neurological examinations to evaluate patients with neurological disorders
- Pathophysiology and natural history of these disorders
- Indications and contraindications to endovascular surgical neuroradiology procedures
- Clinical and technical aspects of endovascular surgical neuroradiology procedures
- Medical and surgical alternatives
- Preoperative and postoperative management of endovascular patients
- Neurointensive care management

- Fundamentals of imaging physics and radiation biology
- Interpretation of radiographic studies pertinent to the practice

Pediatric Radiology

Professional Description

A pediatric radiologist is proficient in all forms of diagnostic imaging as it pertains to treating diseases in the newborn, infant, child, and adolescent. This specialist has knowledge of both imaging and interventional procedures related to the care and management of diseases of children. A pediatric radiologist must be highly knowledgeable of all organ systems as they relate to growth and development, congenital malformations, diseases peculiar to infants and children, and diseases that begin in childhood but cause substantial residual impairment in adulthood.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Satisfactory completion of an ACGME- or RCPSA-accredited diagnostic radiology residency, or other training judged suitable by the program director, is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.
